APR undertakes a wide range of qualitative and quantitative research around New Zealand tailored to meet individual project objectives utilising telephone research, field research, on-line surveys, focus groups, self-completion surveys and face-to-face interviews.

Market research projects have included:

- Market share analysis.
- Media research.
- Product usage and market demand research.
- Customer perception surveys.
- Business and public confidence surveys.
- Customer satisfaction surveys for commercial and non-commercial organisations.
- Economic impact assessments and economic research.

Significant work has also been undertaken in the area of social research utilising innovative techniques such as Participatory Appraisal (PA) Community Visioning. PA is increasingly being used in New Zealand and overseas to provide an insight into community preferences through an engaging and productive process. Other social research includes:

- Social Impact Assessments.
- Housing surveys.
- Local authority surveys.
- Educational surveys into achievement, schooling patterns, etc.
- Recreation and leisure surveys.
- Regional, district and industry employment skills surveys.
